Recommendation

I met JC before the pandemic. I was her youth leader and spiritual director at that time, and getting along with youth like him cultivates a sense of camaraderie. His unwavering faith in God inspires him to serve by attending weekly masses, taking part in prayer meetings, and engaging in fellowship activities. Being involved with this organization focused the corporal works of mercy, and JC was proven to be a dependable member. He uplifts people by incorporating his prior wisdom and spiritual view. He uplifts people by incorporating his prior wisdom and spiritual view, emphasizing the diversity inside the church. He is not difficult to get along with and always agrees to take part in church visits and outreach programs. JC himself thought that he was an average person, but the better asset he had, as I saw, was open-mindedness to all. He has consistently shown kindness and empathy, even in the face of differences within the organization. His willingness to listen and offer support with open arms is truly commendable.

As a counselor of him, I heard of unfortunate events that shaped his character now. In some case, during this public sharing, his reflections on his life experiences lead to thoughtful conversations that reveal the depth of his character. Later, he addresses the difficulties that negligent households confront and emphasizes the value of cultivating a compassionate mind with the goal to nurture healing and connection. I believe that his past experiences enable him to connect with vulnerable children and adolescents, helping them create meaningful lives.
