I would like to recommend Lynn timer J. Usman in her academic pursuit of a Master's Degree. I am currently a College Professor at Marine Sciences and Technology, and I previously worked at Universidad De Zamboanga, where I was one of her college professors. I can attest to her commitment to social responsibility and continuous self-improvement. Lynn timer graduated with honors and received several awards, which, among other things, highlight her perseverance and determination in her studies. She also passed her Professional Teacher Examination on her first attempt

Aside from studies, Lynn timer has proven strong commitment to community involvement. Being a Pantawid Pamilyang Pilipino Program beneficiary and having completed debate and public speaking, she was recognized and awarded a plaque by the City Mayor. Such successes of her have been evidence of motivation for giving back to society and a genuine sense of responsibility. Lynn timer organized outreach programs and taught the youth in marginalized sectors; she has indeed shown interest in making the society better.

Lynn timer always wanted to make a class room inclusive and effective and believed that the classroom needs to be inclusive in practices. This perfectly aligns with her desire to become a Public School Teacher. Her being a member of different organizations supports her commitment to continued learning and professional development. She believes deeply that change is necessary in today's society and places this at the heart of her educational philosophy.
