Recommendation

To whom it may concern,

Greetings of peace!

It is with deep pride and confidence that I recommend Mary Jasslene T. Rocha for the Peace Corps Alumni Foundation for Philippine Development (PCAFPD) Scholarship. In my years of teaching and mentoring, I have rarely encountered a student who so seamlessly combines academic excellence, leadership, creativity, and a genuine desire to uplift others.

As a writer, Mary Jasslene T. Rocha demonstrates clarity of thought, originality of ideas, and artistry with words that make her works stand out among peers. Her essays and creative outputs are not only technically strong but also infused with empathy and insight, reflecting a mind that seeks meaning and a heart that values connection.

Beyond the classroom, Mary Jasslene T. Rocha is a consistent leader, someone who steps forward not out of self-interest, but out of a genuine commitment to serve. Whether organizing school initiatives, leading peers in academic or co-curricular projects, or volunteering in community service, she brings both vision and inclusivity. Her leadership is never about being at the center, but about bringing out the best in others.

Equally admirable is her pleasing personality marked by humility, respect, and kindness. She is well-loved and respected by classmates, teachers, and community members because she engages people with sincerity. Coupled with her academic achievements and active participation in school programs, this character makes them a role model who inspires peers to pursue excellence with integrity.

What stands out most, however, is Mary Jasslene T. Rocha's unwavering commitment to creating positive social change. She understands that education and leadership come with responsibility, and she has shown, in both words and actions, her dedication to making her community a better place. Her ability to balance personal achievement with social responsibility speaks to the very values this scholarship upholds.
