To the PCAFPD Scholarship Committee:

It is with great pride that I recommend Nor Aliya P. Macapintal for the PCAFPD scholarship. As her teacher, I have witnessed her remarkable growth, dedication, and unwavering passion for both academics and leadership.

Nor Aliya is not just an exceptional student who consistently excels in her studies, but she is also a young leader who demonstrates passion and determination in the fields of leadership and journalism. She has spearheaded and implemented various projects that were not only community-based but also significantly impactful within our campus. These initiatives strongly emphasized youth empowerment and inclusivity, fostering a culture of participation and collaboration among her peers. Through her leadership, she has inspired many students to engage actively in programs that strengthen camaraderie and promote social responsibility.

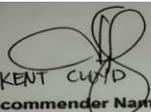

In addition to her leadership projects, Nor Aliya brought pride and honor to the Municipality of Alamada by emerging as a regional qualifier in Editorial Writing (English) during the Campus Journalism competition—the only secondary-level qualifier from our Banwa. This achievement alone speaks volumes of her perseverance, skill, and commitment to excellence. Beyond competitions, she uses her journalistic abilities as a platform to amplify the voices of the youth and raise awareness about important issues affecting her community.

Nor Aliya also extends her service beyond the classroom. She has participated in numerous outreach programs, seminars, and activities, where she consistently exemplifies humility, empathy, and a deep sense of responsibility to others. Her active involvement in both school- and community-based endeavors shows her well-rounded character and readiness to contribute meaningfully to society.

I firmly believe that Nor Aliya P. Macapintal possesses the academic competence, leadership capability, and heart for service that the PCAFPD scholarship seeks to support. She is a promising young leader whose achievements today reflect her potential to make an even greater impact in the future.
