PCAFPD scholars are chosen on the basis of their financial need, academic performance, and commitment to community service and leadership. To the PCAFPD Scholarship Selection Committee:

I had the opportunity to teach the applicant last year, and I currently work with him as his journalism coach. Through these experiences, I have seen his sense of responsibility, initiative, and quiet leadership develop both inside and outside the classroom.

He is a very prompt and responsible student, especially when it comes to reportorial tasks and group outputs. He does not wait to be told what to do. He often takes the lead and makes sure that the work assigned to his group is completed, substantial, and presentable. He is also particular about the quality of his work. His outputs are consistently neat, organized, and carefully prepared, which shows his discipline and commitment to doing things well.

As his journalism coach, I have also witnessed his talent and dedication in editorial cartooning. He is a consistent winner in this field, demonstrating not only artistic skill but also creativity and the ability to express ideas through visual communication. His accomplishments in editorial cartooning are a reflection of his patience, attention to detail, and willingness to improve his craft.

He is a quiet and reserved individual, but I consider this one of his strengths. He does not speak simply to be noticed. When he speaks, he does so with purpose and substance. His leadership is more evident in his actions than in his words. He takes responsibility, helps move his group forward, and makes sure that what they submit reflects their best effort.

Based on my experience as his former teacher and current journalism coach, I see him as a dependable, hardworking, and talented young person who has the potential to contribute meaningfully to his school and community. I believe that providing him with an opportunity such as this scholarship would further encourage him to develop his abilities and use them not only for his own growth but also in service of others.
