Recommendation

I am honored to recommend Angel T. Llanos for consideration for the PCAFPD Scholarship. Angel is a member and Secretary of the San Miguel District Youth Organization of the Southeastern Caraga Mission of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. Through her service in our youth organization, I have had the opportunity to observe her dependability, initiative, willingness to serve, and ability to work responsibly with other young people and church leaders.

As Secretary, Angel assists in maintaining the records of our youth organization, including preparing meeting minutes and other necessary documents. She also helps prepare letters and communications related to our activities. These responsibilities require attention to detail, consistency, and the ability to keep track of information and commitments. Angel has demonstrated that she can be relied upon to carry out the responsibilities entrusted to her.

Her leadership is also evident in the responsibilities she has undertaken during our major youth activities, particularly Friendship Camping, an event that brings together approximately 300 young people. Angel has been involved in the planning and execution of Friendship Camping for two consecutive years.

In 2025, Angel served as Camping Budget Officer and Friendship Team Facilitator. As Budget Officer, she was entrusted with responsibilities related to the financial preparation of the camping activity. As a Friendship Team Facilitator, she also worked directly with youth participants and helped carry out the activities assigned to her team.

In 2026, Angel was entrusted with a greater leadership responsibility as Friendship Team Deputy Head. During the preparation of the camping activity, she participated in conducting workshops and training for the facilitators. During the actual event, she helped oversee the facilitators and monitored the flow of their discussions to help ensure that the sessions proceeded as intended.

The progression from Budget Officer and Facilitator in 2025 to Deputy Head in 2026 reflects the increasing responsibilities entrusted to Angel by the youth organization. Her role has developed from assisting in specific areas of an activity to helping coordinate and oversee other young people involved in the program.

Angel has also contributed to the Cluster 7 and 8 Youth Fellowship, a large gathering involving approximately 500 young people from seven districts and areas: San Miguel District, Madrid District, Tandag Central District, Tandag Suburbs District, Tago District, Cagwait District, and the SANLIABAR District, representing San Agustin, Lianga, and Barobo.

For this large-scale fellowship, Angel was involved in several important aspects of the preparation and conduct of the event. She participated in program planning, organizing billeting quarters for participants, preparing and printing certificates, and handling admission and registration. These responsibilities required her to coordinate with different people and attend to details that directly affected the experience and orderly participation of hundreds of young people.

Her involvement in an event of this scale demonstrates her ability to work beyond the boundaries of her immediate local youth group. She had to coordinate with people from different districts and assist in preparations affecting participants from several municipalities. Her responsibilities also required both advance preparation and attentiveness during the actual event, particularly in registration and participant accommodation.

Angel has likewise participated in other activities of our youth organization, including the San Miguel District Youth Fellowship, conducted at least twice a year; Happy Family Life Seminars; and Global Youth Day, which includes a fun run and other youth-centered activities. Through these programs, she has continued to contribute to activities that bring young people together for fellowship, learning, service, and spiritual growth.

What I value about Angel is her willingness to contribute both in preparation and during the actual conduct of activities. She helps with the organizational work required before an event, but she is also willing to take responsibility when the activity is already underway. Whether she is working with documents, assisting with financial preparations, facilitating young people, helping train facilitators, organizing participant accommodations, or supporting registration, she approaches her responsibilities with seriousness.

Her involvement in our youth organization has allowed her to develop practical skills in organization, communication, documentation, financial responsibility, facilitation, coordination, and teamwork. More importantly, these skills have been developed through service to other young people. The activities she has helped organize and conduct reach hundreds of youth and provide opportunities for fellowship, learning, personal development, and spiritual growth.

Angel continues to pursue her education while remaining involved in church youth activities. Her willingness to devote her time and abilities to youth ministry demonstrates her commitment to serving others. I believe the experiences she has gained through this work will continue to guide her as she develops as a young leader.

The PCAFPD Scholarship considers financial need, academic performance, leadership, and commitment to community service. While I leave the assessment of her overall scholarship eligibility to the committee, I can personally attest to Angel's service as a youth officer and Secretary in our district and to the responsibilities she has undertaken in support of our youth programs.

I therefore respectfully recommend Angel T. Llanos for consideration for the PCAFPD Scholarship. Her record of service demonstrates her willingness to accept responsibility, learn from experience, work with others, and contribute her abilities for the benefit of fellow youth and the church community. I believe that the educational opportunity provided by this scholarship would further equip her to use her abilities in service to others.
